During a multiplayer game, you can speak with your fellow players. Since you are completely free to talk about whatever you want, it is possible that in this context you share personal data and even sensitive personal data, such as information about your family situation and health data (e.g. your illness). No one other than you and the fellow player with whom you share this information will become aware of your name or of what you say. However, the data is exchanged over a digital network, although this information is not stored anywhere.
